INSIGHTS FROM THE SCHOOL CAPTAIN

Ruchira B S Gowda

School Captain, Sharanya
Narayani International
School

Stepping into the role of School Captain was both exciting and overwhelming, because I quickly realised that leadership is far more than a title or a badge. It is about responsibility, trust, and the ability to bring people together. Throughout this journey, I learnt lessons that extended far beyond classrooms and school events. Every challenge, every success, and every interaction shaped me into a more confident and understanding person. The captains before me taught me that confidence without kindness means very little. From them, I learnt that true leaders are remembered not for authority, but for the way they make others feel included, supported, and heard. Teachers showed me that leadership is not about always having the right answers, but about being willing to learn, adapt, and help others grow along the way.

This journey also made me appreciate the value of teamwork. No achievement in school is ever accomplished alone. Behind every successful event and every memorable moment is a group of people working together with dedication and enthusiasm. Being surrounded by such inspiring teachers made this experience even more meaningful.

To the future captains: do not try to become the “perfect” leader. Instead, become a genuine one. Make mistakes, learn from them, and never lose the enthusiasm that made you take up this role in the first place. Lead with empathy, celebrate the achievements of others, and always remember that the smallest acts of encouragement can leave the biggest impact.

One day, you will realise that the greatest achievement was never the position itself, but the growth, memories, and people you gained along the way. Lastly, to all the council members, thank you for your contribution and for making this year incredible.

As I sign off as School Captain, I leave behind a title but carry with me a lifetime of memories, lessons, and pride.

IT IS ABOUT TAKING CARE OF THOSE IN YOUR CHARGE.”

INSIGHTS FROM THE VICE CAPTAIN

Bhavya Tejaswini

Vice School Captain,

To me, leadership is not just about holding a position or giving instructions it is about listening, supporting others, and leading by example. It is about being someone my fellow students can trust and rely on, and someone who works to bring people together. Throughout this journey, I have learned the importance of teamwork, patience, and staying committed even when things get challenging.

I am truly grateful for the trust that has been placed in me by my teachers and peers. It motivates me to do my best every day and to contribute positively to our school environment. I will continue to strive to represent the voices of students, encourage participation, and help create a space where everyone feels included and valued.

As I continue in this role, I hope to leave behind not just memories, but a positive impact that reflects unity, respect, and growth. I look forward to working together with all of you to make our school an even better place.

INSIGHTS FROM THE SPORTS CAPTAIN –BOYS

Rishith S Gowda

Sports Captain, Sharanya
Narayani International

Chasing Glory, Together

If you had told me at the start of this school year that my phone would be flooded with daily training schedules, team lineups, and constant questions about where the extra sports gear was, I probably would have laughed. Being the Boys' Sports Captain for the 2025–2026 academic year has been a wild, fast paced, and incredibly rewarding journey. It wasn't just about wearing a captain's badge, it was about learning what it truly means to lead.

When I first stepped into this role, my biggest goal was to make sure we played with absolute heart. Looking back, I can confidently say we did exactly that. The absolute highlight of our year has to be our historic victory against TISB. For years, playing them felt like an uphill battle. But this time, thanks to weeks of intense training and the loud, non-stop cheering of our incredible crowd, we broke the curse and won. That victory proved that when we stand together, we can overcome any challenge.

But sports at our school isn't just about the senior teams. I was incredibly proud to watch our juniors who step up this year. They went out to represent us in various external competitions, and whether they won or lost, the grit they showed on the field was amazing. Seeing them wear our school colors with pride and fight for every single point showed that the future of our sports program is in very safe hands.

Then, of course, came Sports Day, the biggest event of our school calendar. Helping organize it behind the scenes was a massive task, but seeing it all come together was worth every stressful minute. The energy on the field was unreal. From the proud, disciplined march past to the thrilling track races where everyone was on their feet screaming, it was a day to remember. But more than the gold medals, what stood out to me was the sportsmanship. Seeing students from different houses high-five, hug, and lift each other up after a tough race showed the true spirit of our school.

Finally, I want to give a huge thank you to Mr. Justin. Your guidance and constant support were the real reasons I was able to handle this role, and I am incredibly grateful for everything you've taught me. To my fellow Student Council members: thank you for working tirelessly behind the scenes to make sure every event was a success.

Keep that fire burning, play with pride, and always give your best. It has been an absolute honor to be your captain.

INSIGHTS FROM THE SPORTS CAPTAIN – GIRLS

Shriya Sandeep
Reddy

Sports Captain, Sharanya

Looking back at my journey as the Girls' Sports Captain, I realise it has been about much more than just leading teams or playing matches. It has been a journey of growth. It taught me that sports are not just about results, but about the effort, discipline, and mindset you build along the way. There were moments that challenged me, times when things didn't go as planned, but those experiences helped me grow stronger and more confident.

At the same time, sports have shown me how powerful teamwork can be. You learn to trust the people around you, support each other, and celebrate progress together. That's what makes sports special. It's not just about individual performance, but about the energy and unity of a team working towards something together.

There is also something very real about the way sports test you. They push you out of your comfort zone and make you face both success and failure honestly. You learn how to stay focused under pressure, how to accept setbacks, and how to come back better the next time. These are lessons that stay with you far beyond the field, and they shape the kind of person you become.

To all of you, I would say don't hold yourself back. Try new things, push your limits, and stay consistent. You don't need to be perfect, you just need to be willing to put in the effort.

And to future leaders, remember that leadership is about setting the right example and being someone others can rely on. If you stay committed and support your team, you will make a real difference.

Because at the end of the day, it's not just about how well you play the game, but how much the game helps you grow.

Looking back at my journey as the Activities Captain, I realise it has been about much more than simply organising events or leading teams. It has been a journey filled with creativity, responsibility, teamwork, and personal growth. Every experience taught me the importance of communication, adaptability, and staying calm under pressure while working towards a shared goal.

One of the most memorable parts of this journey was leading Meraki Inter-House Cultural Fest. From planning and coordinating events to managing ideas and ensuring everything came together successfully, the experience taught me the true meaning of leadership behind the scenes. It was inspiring to see students come together with enthusiasm, creativity, and school spirit to make the event such a meaningful celebration.

Being involved in activities also showed me how important teamwork and collaboration are. Every event required communication, trust, and the support of an entire team. Whether it was brainstorming ideas, handling challenges, or celebrating achievements together, each experience helped me grow more confident, adaptable, and resilient while teaching me lessons that will stay with me beyond school.

To everyone, I would say don't hesitate to participate, take initiative, and explore opportunities around you. School activities are not just events — they are experiences that help you grow, build confidence, and create lasting memories. And to future leaders, remember that leadership is not about being in charge, but about inspiring others, supporting your team, and leading with positivity and dedication. Because in the end, the most meaningful part of leadership is not only what you achieve, but the impact you leave on the people around you.

INSIGHTS FROM THE BOARDING CAPTAIN GIRLS

Shanthigrama Krupa

Boarding Captain, Sharanya

Boarding, Unscripted

If there's one thing I've learned as a Boarding Captain, it's that boarding life never really goes exactly as planned and that's what makes it memorable.

This year, with a lot of support from our Head of Boarding and the pastoral care team, we helped organise events that brought everyone together and made boarding feel more like a community than just a routine. From DJ Nights and Housie to mall and McDonald's outings, every event had its own energy and stories behind it.

At DJ Night, I wasn't standing on the side supervising everything I was right in the middle of it, helping things run smoothly while also enjoying the atmosphere with everyone else. Housie Night was just as fun, especially seeing how unexpectedly competitive people became over such a simple game.

One of the funniest moments was definitely the water balloon fight.

We had planned games before it, everything was ready, and then somehow all the balloons disappeared within the first five minutes.

Since the "fight" ended almost as quickly as it started, we later decided to have a pool party instead — which honestly turned out to be even more fun.

Being a Boarding Captain meant balancing responsibility with enjoying the experience itself. There were times when I had to help organise, coordinate, and make sure everything stayed on track, but that also gave me the chance to be involved in creating moments everyone genuinely enjoyed.

Looking back, the best part of boarding was never everything going perfectly. It was the small chaotic moments, the laughter, and the memories we created together that made this year unforgettable.

HALLWAY HEADLINES

~Blood Donation Drive~

What started as just another school initiative soon turned into an experience that left a real impact on all of us. Organizing the blood donation drive took weeks of effort, from spreading awareness and convincing people to volunteer, to managing registrations and ensuring everything ran smoothly on the day itself

Behind the final count of around 35 donors were weeks of effort, conversations, planning, and persistence. It showed us that even within the busy routine of school life, people are always capable of coming together to make a real difference.

Our school's blood donation drive was a heartfelt initiative that brought students, teachers, and parents together for a meaningful cause. Beyond the numbers, the event reflected compassion, unity, and the willingness of our community to make a difference in the lives of others.

SPORTS DAY 2026

SNIS Sports Day 2026 was a celebration of energy, teamwork, and school spirit, bringing together students from all grades to participate in a wide range of athletic events. The day began with an opening ceremony that set the tone, with students marching proudly and representing their houses with enthusiasm and discipline.

Throughout the day, the field was filled with excitement as students competed in track and field events, team games, and fun activities. From sprints and relays to long jump and throw events, every competition reflected determination and effort. What stood out was not just the performances, but the encouragement from peers, teachers, and parents, creating a strong sense of unity and support.

One of the highlights of the day was the display of teamwork and sportsmanship. Students supported each other regardless of the outcome, showing that participation and effort mattered just as much as winning. The cheering from the sidelines and the house spirit added to the vibrant atmosphere, making the event memorable for everyone involved.

The event also highlighted the importance of balance between competition and enjoyment. While students were focused on doing well, there was also a sense of fun and excitement that made the day enjoyable for all. Smiles, laughter, and shared moments off the field were just as important as the achievements on it, making the experience more meaningful.

Another memorable part of the day was the level of commitment shown by every participant. Whether it was someone competing in multiple events or someone stepping out of their comfort zone to try something new, the effort was visible everywhere. It showed that sports day is not just for the most experienced athletes, but for everyone who is willing to take part and give their best.

The day concluded with a closing ceremony where achievements were recognised and efforts were appreciated. More than just a competition, SNIS Sports Day 2026 reminded everyone of the importance of staying active, working together, and enjoying the process.

Overall, it was a day filled with passion, positivity, and unforgettable moments that truly reflected the spirit of sports at SNIS.

RUN4CARE 7.0

-Siddharth Verma

Organizing Committee

Member of RUN4CARE

RUN4CARE 7.0 this year was honestly one of the biggest things our batch has taken on, and being one of the heads behind it made the entire experience both exhausting and rewarding at the same time. What most people saw on February 1st was the final event — the runners, music, Zumba, food stalls, checkpoints, medals, and crowds — but behind all of that were months of planning, coordination, mistakes, pressure, and teamwork that slowly built the event into what it became.

One of the biggest focuses this year was fundraising and registrations. Throughout January, groups of students went across different apartment communities, cafés, villas, and public spaces for on-spot registrations. We spent entire weekends speaking to people, explaining the purpose of RUN4CARE, and convincing them to support the cause. Some people walked away immediately, some ignored us completely, while others genuinely took time to listen and donate. Those interactions taught us a lot about communication and persistence. During Parent Teacher Meetings as well, student volunteers spent hours helping increase registrations and donations. Slowly, the numbers started building.

Preparation for RUN4CARE started long before the actual event day. Even before winter break, the organizing heads had already begun planning the structure of the event, dividing responsibilities, and figuring out how we were going to make this year's edition bigger and smoother than before. Different teams were formed for logistics, registrations, sponsorships, media, fundraising, creatives, and volunteer management, with each team playing a huge role in making sure everything worked properly.

At the same time, another major task was managing registrations and donor data. Large spreadsheets had to be constantly updated with runner categories, payment confirmations, contact details, and T-shirt deliveries, which became hectic once registrations started increasing quickly.

Social media also helped push RUN4CARE further this year. Through reels, posters, photography, and videos, we made the event feel more active and engaging online. Compared to previous years, the reach and engagement were much better, helping more people know about the event and participate.

As the event got closer, preparations became more intense. The running track had to be fully set up with checkpoints, signs, barriers, water stations, and volunteers across the route. Alongside that, food stalls, technical setups, speakers, medals, and registrations all had to be coordinated at the same time

On the event day itself, organizers and volunteers reached before sunrise to begin final setup. Despite the pressure and scale of the event, everything ran smoothly. Hundreds of runners participated, stalls stayed active throughout the morning, and the atmosphere remained energetic till the very end.

Most importantly, RUN4CARE 7.0 raised around $9,000 USD for Karunashraya Hospice in Bangalore. Seeing months of effort finally come together for a meaningful cause made the entire experience worth it.

What made RUN4CARE special was not just the amount raised, but how students genuinely came together to make something impactful happen. From volunteers at checkpoints to students working on media and registrations, every contribution mattered. Looking back, it was stressful and tiring at times, but seeing the final event come together made all of it worth it.

Science Day at our school was a vibrant celebration of creativity, curiosity, and innovation. The entire campus was filled with excitement as students came together to explore science in fun and interactive ways

Science Day

One of the most thrilling attractions was the school-wide treasure hunt, organized by DP1 ESS students, where students raced across the campus solving clues and completing scientific challenges. The activity encouraged teamwork and kept the energy throughout the day.

"FAST BUZZERS AND BIG BRAINS: INSIDE THE 2026 SCIENCE QUIZ."

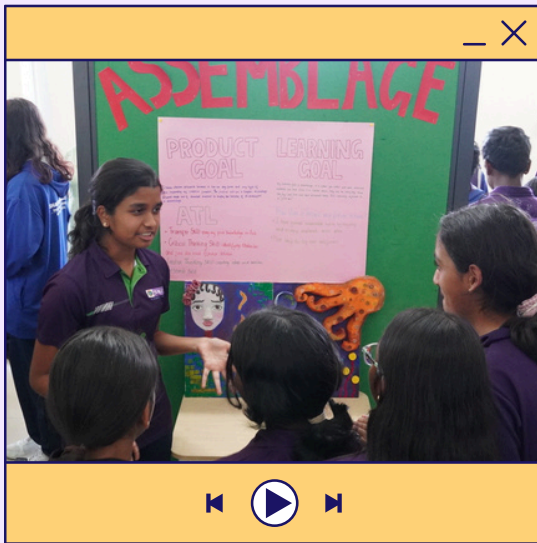

The MPH was transformed into a high-stakes arena last week for the Inter-House Science Quiz. The setup was intense: Magnolia, Aspen, Juniper, and Sequoia each claimed a corner of the stage, creating a four-way standoff that had the DP1 and MYP audience on the edge of their seats.

The Seniors kicked things off with more than just a standard test. We're talking rapid-fire buzzer rounds and interactive logic games that had the whole room buzzing. The energy was electric—every time a student hit the buzzer a split-second early, the crowd erupted. Seeing our peers crush complex physics and biology under that kind of pressure was genuinely impressive.

When the MYP juniors took over, they kept the momentum going. They tackled their rounds with a level of focus and teamwork that proved scientific curiosity starts long before the DP years. By the final round, it was clear that the day wasn't just about memorizing facts; it was about quick thinking and house pride. Whether we were on stage or in the crowd, we all left a little more inspired by the brilliance on display.

MYP 5 PERSONAL PROJECT

The IB MYP Personal Project is more than just an academic task — it is a journey of passion, creativity, and personal growth. Through the project, students explore topics they truly care about while developing important skills such as perseverance, discipline, and time management

One student chose guitar learning and performance as their project, turning a love for music into an opportunity for growth. Along the way, challenges such as stage fright, difficult practice sessions, and even a broken guitar tested their determination. However, these obstacles helped build resilience and confidence

By the end of the journey, the project became more than simply learning an instrument. It was an experience that taught the student to step out of their comfort zone, believe in their progress, and face challenges with confidence — reflecting the true spirit of the MYP Personal Project

The evening ended with students enjoying quality time with friends, teachers and classmates, sharing laughter, memories and heartfelt conversations over a delicious dinner. It was the perfect ending to an unforgettable night.

Here's to the past, the memories, and the amazing future ahead!

THE CLUBS THAT STOLE THE SPOTLIGHT

The end-of-year Club Presentations showed that school clubs are about much more than just after-school meetings. From TEDx and World Scholars to MUN and Life Skills, every club brought its own personality and energy to the stage.

TEDx impressed everyone with confident speaking and big ideas, while World Scholars and MUN turned discussions into what sounded like real-world debates and diplomatic meetings. Life Skills reminded everyone that surviving everyday life is just as important as surviving exams.

What made the event fun was how interactive and creative each presentation was. Some clubs brought games, others brought performances, and a few brought enough enthusiasm for the whole auditorium.

Overall, the presentations were a great way to end the year — full of confidence, creativity, teamwork, and a few moments where everyone realised public speaking is either your biggest strength or your biggest fear.

"BRILLIANT MINDS, BOLD VOICES: INSIDE THE 2026 INTER-HOUSE DEBATE."

The Art of Argument

The activity room was packed as Grade 9 and 11 students gathered to witness a different kind of competition: a total war of words. The event kicked off with a high-energy face-off between Magnolia and Sequoia, where the speakers didn't just rely on logic but used expressive actions and gestures that kept everyone hooked. Not to be outdone, Aspen and Juniper followed with a round of "hyper-entertainment," bringing a mix of sharp rebuttals and personality that turned a standard classroom debate into a gripping show. It was a brilliant display of confidence and quick thinking, proving that sometimes the most intense battles happen at the podium rather than on the field. Every house brought their own unique style to the floor, leaving the audience impressed by how much energy a good argument can truly hold.

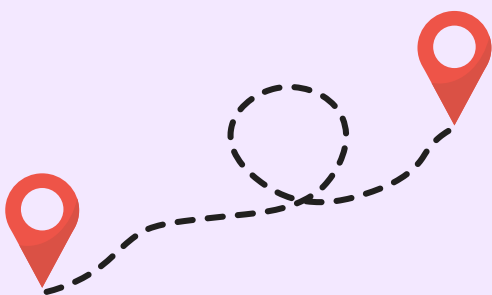

EXPLORING BEYOND THE CLASSROOM

Students from Grades 9 and 11 recently went on an educational field trip to two different locations GKVK and the CV Raman Institute — making learning far more exciting than simply sitting in a classroom.

The Biology and Environmental Systems students visited GKVK, where they explored different plant species, agricultural practices, and research areas. The trip gave students a better understanding of sustainability, biodiversity, and how science is applied in real-world environments.

Meanwhile, the Physics students visited the CV Raman Institute, where they learned about the life and work of C. V. Raman. Students explored displays, scientific instruments, and collections connected to his discoveries, gaining a deeper understanding of his contributions to physics and science.

Overall, the trip gave students the opportunity to connect classroom learning with real experiences, while also making science feel more interactive, interesting, and memorable.

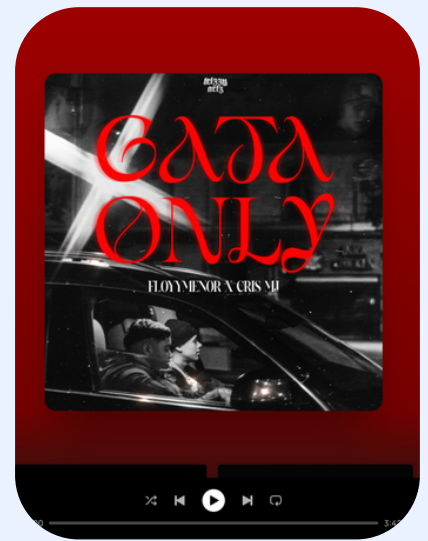

DÍA DE ESPAÑA

This year's Spanish Day was honestly a really cultural experience. Our group performed to modern Chilean Spanish songs from artists like Cris Mj and FloyyMenor, including Gata Only, which made the whole performance feel way more energetic and modern. We mixed styles like salsa with other Latin dance styles, and the crowd was really into it.

The rehearsals were probably one of the best parts because everyone was just having fun with it. Nobody took it too seriously, so practices were full of music, jokes, and people trying to perfect the choreography together. Since the songs were already popular and upbeat, it made performing feel natural instead of stressful.

After all the performances, everyone got to enjoy different Spanish dishes and food, which made the event feel even more cultural and interactive instead of just being about the dances. Overall, Spanish Day felt less like a school event and more like everyone coming together to enjoy the music, food, and atmosphere.

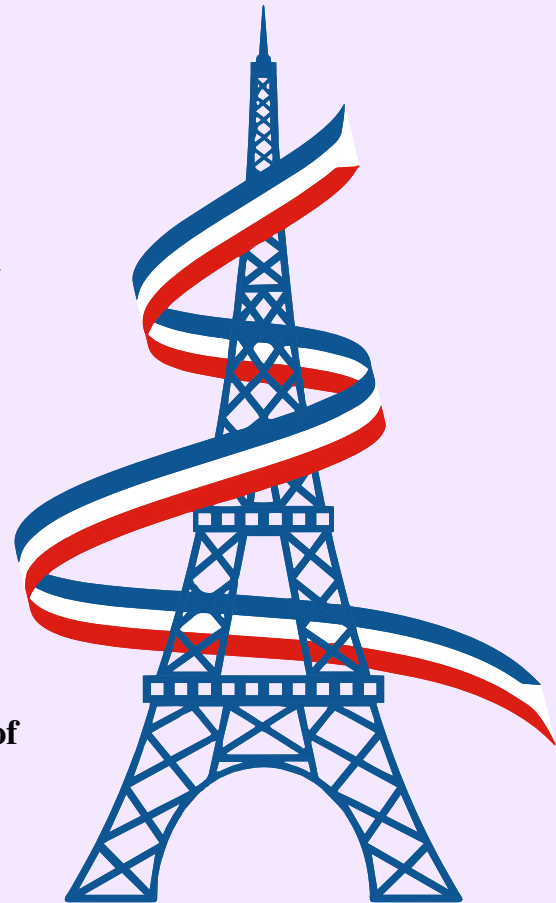

FRANCOPHONIE DAY

French Day was a vibrant celebration of language, culture, and creativity. Students enthusiastically showcased their talents through engaging performances that reflected the beauty and richness of the French language.

One of the highlights of the event was the entertaining skit performed by students, which brought energy, humor, and cultural expression to the stage. Adding to the celebration, the DP1 students delivered an exceptional dance performance that captivated the audience with its enthusiasm and coordination. Alongside their performance, they also shared the significance of the French language and its influence across different countries around the world, highlighting how French connects diverse cultures globally.

The celebration truly reflected the spirit of learning languages beyond the classroom and appreciating cultures from around the world.

"DIVIDING THE WATER, UNITING THE HOUSES: INSIDE THE 2026 SWIMMING GALA."

The energy at the pool was amazing as students from every house jumped in to compete. We saw some really fast individual races and exciting team relays that had everyone on their feet cheering.

It was great to see so much hard work and team spirit from everyone involved. A big congratulations to all the winners who took home medals, but also a huge well done to every single swimmer who gave it their best. You all showed what our school spirit is all about by fighting for every point until the very end!

Indoor Badminton: Fast Games, Stronger Team Spirit

This year's Indoor Badminton Interhouse tournament brought energy, competition, and plenty of memorable moments to the court. From intense singles matches to fast-paced doubles games, every house showed incredible teamwork, determination, and sportsmanship throughout the event.

Both boys and girls gave their best in every match, creating an atmosphere that was competitive while still encouraging and supportive. The doubles matches especially highlighted communication and coordination, with players working together under pressure and keeping the spirit of the game alive.

What stood out most was the way every house supported one another — cheering from the sidelines, motivating teammates, and respecting opponents regardless of the results. The tournament was not just about winning points, but about building confidence, teamwork, and house spirit.

Overall, Indoor Badminton was a great success, filled with exciting rallies, close matches, and moments that reflected the true spirit of interhouse sports.

THE DUKE'S PLAN

-NYSITA

The royal children, as expected, were polite, dainty, and smart. They were twins, Charlotte and James. Their parents, the King and Queen, were His Majesty, King Adrian the Second, and Her Highness, Queen Zoe(née Lawrence). They were the highest of the high. They had no enemies... Well, nearly no enemies. They had a single enemy: The Duke of Elsington, William.

He had hated the King since childhood, as both of them had gone to Eton. And when he married the daughter of the wealthiest nobleman, he now despised him and his wife. He had always felt like the rightful heir to the throne and that the throne had been stolen from his ancient forefathers. One day, he decided that it was time to take his rightful place. He went to the Grand Wizard, Orkus. He asked, "What manly pleasure do you require for me to do, O great Duke?" "I need hypnotising powers. I need it to become the King of Ortol," replied the duke. The wizard nodded his head and muttered to no one in particular, "Yes, yes... That's not the right spell! Mhmm." Orkus looked as ancient as the Sumerians, but when he found the spell he was looking for, he jumped up deftly with the swiftness of someone in their early twenties. He recited while pointing his wand at William, "Cajun por ti asigota, artisemo carte portarto!" A blinding blue light went as fast as it came. The duke was extremely nonplussed, but graciously thanked him all the same. 'Now, the time has come to put my plan into action!' thought the duke slyly.

Little did the duke know that one of Orkus's apprentices was also a servant of the royal children. As soon as his work was over, he rushed over to the palace to alert the King and Queen about the Duke's plan. He was told by a guard that they were busy with matters much more important than what a servant could tell. Trying to keep calm, he rushed over to the twins' room. Charlotte was raving over an extremely hard Sudoku puzzle while James looked annoyed and tried to focus on reading his book. The apprentice burst into the room, diverting their attention by saying, "Your Majesties, the Duke of Elsington is trying to take over Ortol by hypnotising everyone! He plans to start tomorrow! Please, I beg you to do something about it; otherwise, we are all doomed to death!" The twins shared a panicked look, which then turned determined. "Don't worry, we'll do something about it. And we'll tell you what we've done at the soonest." Charlotte said, in an attempt to reassure him. James nodded solemnly, as if to say that he agreed. The servant went out, looking somewhat reassured but scared. James closed the door and sighed deeply, "Now what? We promised him something, but my brain is having a brain fart." "Well, unlike you, I know what to do!" said Charlotte, with a sense of superiority. "We create a de-hypnotising machine which also protects us from hypnosis and also drains powers!" she added, creating a vision in her head. "Hmmm... not a bad idea!" said James, acting like he was in deep thought. Charlotte rolled her eyes and replied, "Don't be an idiot, you knew it was a good idea! Buck up, we have no time to waste!" She motioned for James to come over.

They opened their chest of magical mechanical pieces to create their machine. They went to a technical specialist to find out if it worked or not. He said, "Not quite, you need to add doctists, pandoms, and cartises. These are important for power-draining. But, I say, you two are quite smart for your age!" They smiled, accepted the compliment, and went back to their room to add the materials.

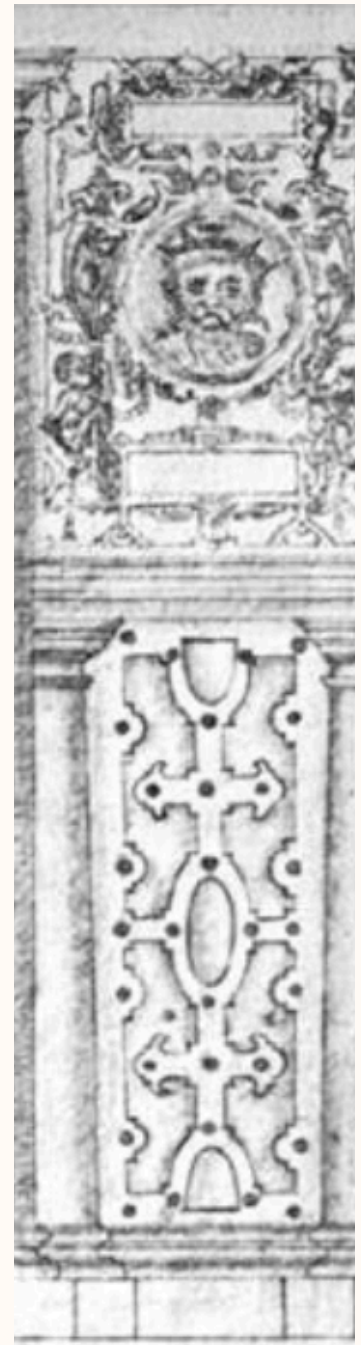

After tea, when their parents came to spend quality time with them, they told the whole story with no exaggeration (quite an achievement for James!). Their parents knew that their children weren't joking. They could never keep a straight face while pranking someone, and right now, their faces were as straight as lines. They also told their parents about their prevention act. Their mother patted their heads as if to say that she was proud of them. They scowled; they didn't like being treated like toddlers. Next, they called the servant who supplied them with the information and told him what they had done.

Sure enough, the Duke had hypnotised nearly everyone. He decided that it was time for the royal family to take a step into the havoc. Everyone was having breakfast. Ah, a perfect opportunity for him. He entered the room with a fake, shimmering smile, saying, "Good Morning, Your Majesties!" He spat the last word out. "I'm here to hypnotise you!" He made a plus sign and then made the shape of a crown. The king raised an eyebrow in suspicion, the queen looked surprised, and the twins giggled. "William, what on earth are you doing? You made signs like a clown teaching the twins!" Said the King. "I am the King of Ortol, and no one can stop me!" He replied, looking affronted. "Now, who gave you that silly idea? We stopped you from hypnotising us with our machine. It's time to drain your powers. We shan't tell you anything about how we know." Said Charlotte.

The duke's jaw dropped. How could these silly little idiots find out? He didn't move an inch, frozen in awe and fear. James lifted the machine and aimed it at the duke. "3... 2... 1... SHOOT!!" yelled Charlotte. The duke crumbled to the floor. He was weak, but strong enough to realise that he had been an idiot all this time. No wonder he never had any friends; they had all been sensible from the start. While he was thinking about all this, he hadn't paid attention to the tears welling up in his eyes. He let them flow freely, begging forgiveness. The twins were sceptical, but the Queen nodded, and the King held him by his shoulders, helped him get up, and said, "I had forgiven you from the start. I knew you would come round at some point of time!" "B-but, what about all the people I hypnotised?" asked the duke. "They all have been returned to their original state as soon as your powers were drained, and have no memory of anything", said James. "Thank you for the second chance I probably didn't deserve," said the duke.

The Queen replied, "The royal family believes that everyone should have a second chance."

The language of Indian Classical Dances

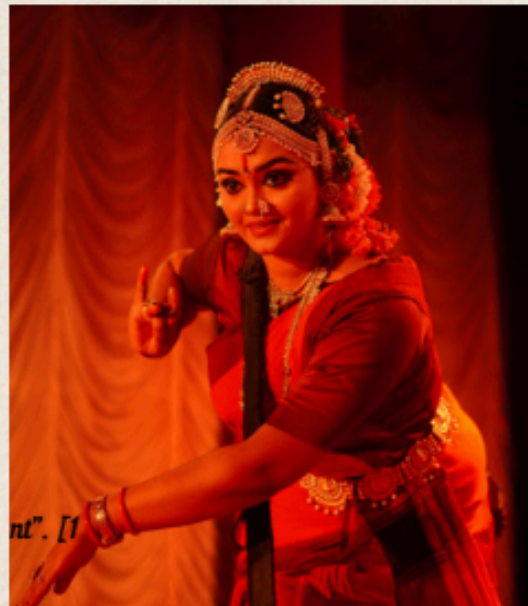

Have you ever seen a person telling a story without saying anything? I am talking about dance. In dance every move and every step and every face expression means something. A classical dance dancer can show that they are happy or sad or angry or in love, by moving and with the music. This is what makes classical dance so magical and unique.

Classical dance is one of the oldest and most respected art forms in the world. In India classical dance started a time ago in temples and royal courts. People did these dances to worship gods, tell stories from myths and entertain others. Over time classical dance, Different regions developed their styles of classical dance. You have Bharatanatyam, Kathak, Odissi and Kuchipudi which're very famous.

Each classical dance style has its special costumes, music and way of dancing.

I think one of the things about dance is the way classical dance tells stories.

Classical dance uses hand gestures and eye movements and facial expressions to show emotions and tell stories to the people who are watching dance. The colorful costumes and old jewelry and rhythmic music make every classical dance performance look really elegant and exciting.

Classical dance also teaches people important things. It teaches discipline, patience and practice. You need to be confident when you do classical dance. People who do classical dance learn to focus, work hard and express themselves in a way. Classical dance also helps people remember their culture and traditions.

Nowadays classical dance still inspires people around the world. Today classical dance is a powerful way to keep history, culture and beauty alive through rhythm and movement. Classical dance is something that people love. It continues to be a big part of many people's lives.

THE SCARY HALLOWEEN!!!

-CHAITRA -MYP 2

The moon hung low and pale with fright,
A silver eye in velvet night.
The leaves skittered across the streets
Like tiny ghosts with restless feet.

Jake-o-lanterns lined the lane,
Their crooked smiles lit by flame.
From house to house the childrens ran,
With capes and masks and sticky hands.

But near the end of willow road
Stood one dark house no neighbor showed.
No candy bowl, no porch light glow—
Just silent windows black as crow.

A knock was heard, the door creaked wide.
No one stood waiting there inside.
Only a whisper, cold and thin:

“ Happy Halloween... come in “

VICTORIOUS-DEFEAT: TRUTH WILL ALWAYS PREVAIL

-DINESH KRISHNA BODUGU

(Beep) (beep) (beep), a notification lands on Ron's matte black iPhone 16, the 2 nearly perfect circular cameras holding the phone. Ron comes out of a fresh, hot, refreshing bath, his face covered with tiny water droplets, the cold A/C room welcoming him to a fine-mess filled with the pungent smell of coconut oil, the floor as cold as ice, the sun as fierce as fire. Ron is a school student in the city of Calicut, Kerala. His room is spacious with a lavish queen sized bed accompanied but 2 kingly royal green black out curtains blocking the gorgeous view of the rolling hills and a bright, scenic sunrise. The open balcony outside with the pleasant melody of chirping birds and screaming crickets filled his room with a subtly pleasant mood. His room also has a studious study table and patriotically communist night lamp but has been changed into a part-time gaming arena, with 2 heavenly fluffy bean bags as soft as clouds and a Ps-5.

Ron slowly steps towards his phone which is now filled with about a 100 thousand notifications, he lifts his new phone gently, his face filled with surprise as he sees the humongous amount of notifications he has received. he opens his phone and scrolls through the messages, first opening his best friend Jose's messages, his grip tightened, the teeth clinched to one another, his smile faded, the obnoxious glow on his face lit up like a lone lamp in the mist of darkness

The message read "My friend you topped our school in the midterm exams".

Ron was visibly flabbergasted with this high commendation but then a chill runs down his spine, his hair tingling, a feeling that someone is watching, he senses a character behind him slowly approaching his instinct to fight kicks in. He turns around to see his mom who drags him into the hall, to a huge crowd celebrating his achievement. He looks at his phone to see the whole school inundated his Instagram with their best wishes.

He inner voice filled with a familiar sense of pride "Ofcourse it's me, no one else could do this"

A slow second passes as he is on his bed exhilarated by the result, a quiet room filled with unknown emptiness, something pulling his body, maybe a sin which was never committed.

An empty feeling arises in his heart, anonymous but nearly distant from reality. A thought, a mystery and problem surfaces, his mind starts to ponder about his memories, a doubt on his eligibility. A realization occurs as he recalls that he was out on a road trip on the day of the final test. As he was thinking about how he could have got the award he remembered another new student in his grade with the same name.

Later that day

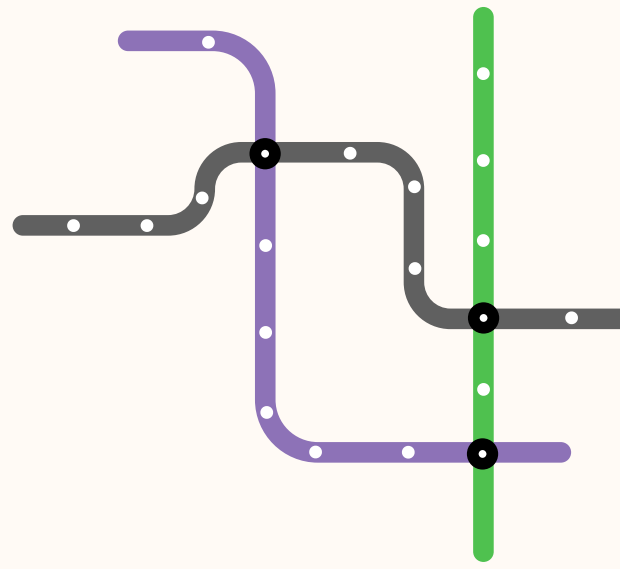

As Ron was lying on his bed he was left with the choice to speak out the truth and be honest or take credit for an unjust award. He sat in his room pondering about the outcome of any action which will be taken. Heart pounding, Ron had found the courage to jeopardize his own image for being truthful, he opened instagram and began to type

"I think this award belongs to someone else..."

As he hit post, the birds stopped chirping, the sun began setting...

Mindlessly, Mindfully, Hopelessly, Hopefully,
We entrust ourselves to your move

Different names but - same emotion, same soul,
Just the iron lady, stretching across meters, being a part of our lives
O mother metro

We take solace in you,
A warm place to shield us from the harsh world,
Our day depends on you,
O mother metro

Stern that you will take care of them
You experience all - anger, happiness, sadness, and even criticism,
From those children who take solace in you - yet burn with an insatiable

Announcing every ten minutes - in different dialects,
You go even to the extent to tell us to stay away from the doors -
With stickers stuck around yourself for our safety
Wearing commercials in the hot summer's sun

You are a boon to us - O Mother metro

Plant-Based Meat

Plant-based meats are alternatives to animal meat ⇒ plant ingredients including; soy, wheat gluten or pea protein.

They work towards satisfying the taste, texture and nutritional benefits of regular meat, minimizing environmental harm.

Problem

The production of meat for animals ⇒ unsustainable as livestock releases harmful greenhouse gases; Methane during excretion

Water resources repletion ⇒ animal consumption while farming.
Requirement of major land resources for cattle ⇒ deforestation + biodiversity loss.

Rising ethical concerns regarding animal welfare ⇒ brutal slaughtering, overcrowded spaces.

ACTION - Businesses including; "Beyond Meat" and "Impossible Foods" are producing large-scale plant-based meat ⇒ encourages these sustainable alternatives to be more 'accessible' and 'affordable' to the general public. ⇒ Help alleviate malnutrition.

NGOs such as; "Good Food Institute" (GFI) conducts plant-based food awareness campaigns to promote a greater demand for sustainable food choices among the public.

Message

Plant-based meat may have its challenges, but with Research and Development investments and greater awareness, this sustainable alternative can guide us toward an environmentally-responsible generation!

IMPACT

Pros -

⇒ Reduces greenhouse gas emissions and land and water usage. "Plant-based meats produce upto 90% fewer greenhouse gases, and use 93% less land compared to beef." (Poore n' Nemecek; 2018)
⇒ "Over 70 billion land animals are slaughtered worldwide annually for meat". Plant-based meat lessens animal cruelty; spars several animals from harming practices.

Cons -

⇒ Lacks effective nutritional requirements available in animal meat - Vitamin B12, iron. ⇒ Generate health concerns in the community.
⇒ Expensive and less accessibility - higher costs of plant-based meat ⇒ costly ingredients + heavy capital investment into high-tech machinery. According to GFI, "plant-based meats are typically about 82% more expensive than traditional meat."

ISABELLA O ISABELLA

– ISHAANVI TUNUGUNTLA

Who are you?
and what have you done to little lizzy?
Where are the ribbons woven into her golden locks?
Where are the playful hues that dance across her clothes?
Where are the smudges of playtime that clung to her skin?
Where is the crinkle in her eyes when a smile stretches her face?
Where is the pearl necklace she stole from her moms dresser?
Where are the days she twirled to the tunes freely, happily?
Where? Where did it all go?
She was washed away in time,
Drowned in the deep abyss of growing up.
They said she was too old to pretend and too young to know
And so she hid under her carefully crafted mask
“Bella” they call the reboot
Instead she became
The one with cascading waves of coal tresses
The one with sparkling mischief and laughter trapped within her dark irises
The one with scarlet whispers on her porcelain skin
The one with a touch of gold across her face
The one with the raging mood swings
The one with Olivia Rodrigo on repeat and headphones that doubled as shields

This girl was only a mere imitation
The real one was yet to grace her insecurities
Like a snake’s exoskin
Teenage skin sheds slowly
Layer by layer
Now she is isabella
She has loose copper strands framing her face
She has a red lip, you can spot from miles away
She wears pantsuits that hug her frame
She has eyes that promise to tell you a million stories
She has cardigan on repeat as if it were a second skin
And yet,
She never changed,
She just evolved,
And as she likes to say,
She is now her.

On the ground, he towers so tall
Barely holding his bat at all
And with shots that are not afraid to soar
Hardik plays, and spirits soar.

Through the screams and through the agony
He comes back up with sheer dignity
A true fighter with a great heart
Pride of cricket for everyone.

In every shot and every chase
He glows like the rising rays of grace
The fans cheer him with great delight
For Hardik's unique style of cricket.

THE SKY IS WARMING UP

— SIRI

Leading the fight against climate change
Lots of obstacles that we will face
Global warming is coming soon
But we will still see the sun and moon
What about our plants and trees?
Mother Earth needs some peace
On top of the trees are some honey bees
Lovely birds sweetly sing
Global warming might be near

Climate change is already here
There is a lot of things we can't resist
The lovely Earth that we should kiss
Let us save our mother nature
Let us make it in perfect structure
Life is pleasant here on Earth
Don't let disaster become her birth

EXAMS! EXAMS! EXAMS!

My exams are near
My closest fear
Before them I have to plan
And use my time as best as I can

— KEERTHIKA

The night before my test
I try my best not to rest
But my mother slams
So I try not ruin her plans

So the next day I go to school
And try my best not to become a fool
And in class with my eyes half shut
I nod to my teacher and say “yup”

In the exam I write with care
To make sure my paper is clean and fair
After I submit, I ask my friend
Then I check till the very end

At last the exam has come to an end
I say I wrote it all correct, I pretend
So, Bye my beloved enemy
Hope I don't keep you in my memory

WHAT CAN YOGA REALLY DO?

BY : KAKARLA JESHITH

It has been 1 year since I started doing yoga. Yoga has been a daily practise for me. It has played a vital role in my mental health. It gave me active relief and was a stress-free practice for me.

At the start of yoga, I felt it was not my vibe, and I thought it was boring. I regret saying all that because it shaped me to be a better person, have patience, and control my anger and emotions. Making me see a whole new version of myself. Every day in the early morning, I woke up and started yoga with spiritual mantras, chanting, and with an energizing “OM” chant. When all the voices in the room come up with beautiful and synchronizing. Mantras made me forget all the negative things and gave me a sense of full positive thought and vibes. The yoga when i started doing it my flexibility and focus were zero. Then had helped me improvise it and made me a fit person. The suryanamskaras which has become a daily practice. Which had helped me really physically and mentally.

I would like to thank yoga from the bottom of my heart. For shaping me and my character. I would encourage more and many people to do yoga as their daily practise.

Thank you..

DESPICABLE ME4

REVIEW

Despicable Me 4 delivers the signature chaotic energy fans expect, centering on Gru's attempt to balance fatherhood with a high-stakes witness protection mission. The introduction of Gru Jr. adds a fresh domestic spark, though the plot occasionally feels cluttered with its numerous subplots. A major highlight is the debut of the Mega Minions, whose superhero parodies provide the film's most inventive slapstick moments. Will Ferrell's performance as the cockroach-themed villain Maxime Le Mal is delightfully over-the-top, even if the character's motivations feel a bit thin. Visually, the animation remains vibrant and polished, maintaining the high standard set by Illumination's previous entries.

While the narrative structure is somewhat fragmented, the fast-paced humor ensures there is never a dull moment for younger viewers. Steve Carell continues to anchor the franchise with his charming vocal performance, making Gru as likable as ever.

However, the film leans heavily on its established formula, offering comfort over genuine narrative innovation. It ultimately serves as a dependable crowd-pleaser that prioritizes laughs and spectacle over deep emotional resonance. For those seeking a fun, lighthearted family experience, it successfully checks all the necessary boxes.
